

Exceptional Kids

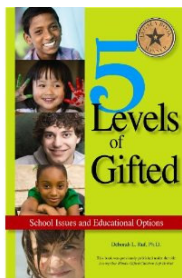

October 2010

Navigation, negotiation and nurturing are concepts that parents of gifted children encounter daily. Take some time, this month to sit in your child's bedroom while they are asleep. Marvel at the wondrous things your child has achieved and quietly applaud your advocacy efforts. Remind yourself that their childhood is fleeting and try to savor their simple pleasures and discoveries.

An 'Exceptional' Quote

"Gifted children are not perfect. They, like other children, must be expected to have flaws and limitations, to aggravate and disappoint as well as bring joy." p. 196 Alvino (1985)
